

Melvil Dewey's Decimal Classification System

Melvil Dewey (1851-1931), a librarian at Amherst College, developed the book classification system that is used by most school and public libraries. He superimposed decimal numbers on a structure of knowledge first outlined by Sir Francis Bacon. There are ten main classes, each of which is further divided into ten secondary classes or subcategories, each of which contains ten subdivisions. The Online Computer Library Center (OCLC) maintains and updates the Dewey Decimal Classification System. The following classifications are based on public domain versions of Dewey's original system, but some words have been modernized.
